Contents:

1. The Need for a Multidisciplinary Approach to Prehistoric Demography
   Richard R. Paine

I. The Data of Prehistoric Demography

2. The Question of Time: The Impact of Chronology on Copán Prehistoric Settlement Demography
   AnnCorinne Freter

3. The Comparative Senescent Biology of the Hominoid Pelvis and Its Implications for the Use of Age-at-Death Indicators in the Human Skeleton
   C. Owen Lovejoy, Richard S. Meindl, Robert G. Tague, and Bruce Latimer

4. Regress What on What? Paleodemographic Age Estimation as a Calibration Problem
   Lyle W. Konigsberg, Susan R. Frankenberg, and Renee B. Walker

5. Living Records of Past Population Change
   Henry Harpending

   Glenn R. Storey

7. Archaeological and Paleodemographic Analyses of the El Cajón Skeletal Population
   Rebecca Storey and Kenneth Hi

8. Evaluating Archaeological Hypotheses of Population Growth and Decline on the Central Coast of Peru
   Joseph A. Vradenburg, Robert A. Benfer Jr., and Lisa Sattenspiel

II. Issues of Analysis and Interpretation

9. Seeking Demographic Causes for Changes in Population Growth Rates
   Don E. Dumond

10. Uniformitarian Models in Osteological Paleodemography
    Richard R. Paine

11. Catastrophic Mortality in Simulations of Forager Age-at-Death: Where Did All the Humans Go?
    Charles N. W. Keckler
12. Estimating Patterns of Disease and Mortality in a Medieval Danish Village
   Jesper L. Boldsen

13. Does Paleopathology Measure Community Health? A Rebuttal of “The Osteological Paradox” and Its Implication for World History
   Mark Nathan Cohen

III. Population and Culture Change

14. A Rigorous Approach to Population Pressure’s Contribution to Cultural Evolution
   Robert Bates Graber

15. Population Pressure and the Origins of Warfare in the Moche Valley, Peru
   Brian R. Billman

16. Issues in the Archaeological Demography of the Agricultural Transition in Western and Northern Europe: A View from the Mesolithic
   Christopher Meiklejohn, Jeffrey M. Wyman, Kenneth Jacobs, and Mary K. Jackes

17. Contact Period Huron Demography
   Norman C. Sullivan

18. Native Eastern American Population Continuity and Stability
   Jon Muller

IV. Discussion and Summary Remarks

19. Paleodemography: Context and Promise
   Jane E. Buikstra

20. Prehistoric Populations Studies and Anthropology’s Future
   William T. Sanders