

Occasional Paper No. 27
Hierarchies in Action: Cui Bono?

Close Window

Contents:

1. Introduction: For Whom the Good?
Michael W. Diehl

I. Humans as Fundamentally Hierarchical Animals
2. Some Thoughts on the Study of Hierarchies
Michael W. Diehl
3. Forager Hierarchies, Innate Dispositions, and the Behavioral
Reconstruction of Prehistory
Christopher Boehm
4. Hunting and the Evolution of Egalitarian Societies: Lessons from the Hadza
Kristen Hawkes
5. Status Signaling, Social Power, and Lineage Survival
James L. Boone

II. The Recognition and Description of Hierarchies
6. Costs, Benefits, Typologies, and Power: The Evolution of Political Hierarchy
Paul Roscoe
7. Can a Small Fish Swallow a Big One? Or, Orwell among the Hawaiians
Robert J. Hommon
8. Corporate/Network: A New Perspective on Leadership in the American Southwest
Gary M. Feinman
9. The Construction of Hierarchy: Rethinking the Copper Age in Southeastern Europe
Peter F. Biehl and Arkadiusz Marciniak
10. A Mesopotamian Hierarchy in Action in Ancient Uruk
Hans J. Nissen

III. Archaeologically Known Hierarchies in Action
11. The Origins of Hierarchy and the Nature of Hierarchical Structures in Prehistoric California
Jeanne E. Arnold
12. Nearer, My Chieftain, to Thee: Central Place Theory and Chiefdoms,
Revisited

D. Blair Gibson

13. Labor Organization and Social Hierarchies in North American Arctic Whaling Societies
Colin Grier
14. Wittfogel Was Half Right: The Ethnology of Consensual and Nonconsensual Hierarchies in Irrigation Management
Jonathan B. Mabry
15. Ritual, Power, and Social Differentiation in Small-Scale Societies
James M. Potter
16. Negotiating Rank in an Imperial State: Lake Titicaca Basin Elite under Inca and Spanish Control
Charles Stanish
17. Cui Bono? An Economic Cost-Benefit Analysis of Statuses in the Roman Empire
Glenn R. Storey